

Overview:

The IRB currently charges a fee for the Initial review and Renewal (continuing review) but not for Modifications. If the study requires greater than annual review, the fee is only charged once a year. Studies that are subject to the IRB review fees will not be processed until the fees are paid in full. There may be circumstances when the industry collaborator is not funding the entire study but is supporting the study by providing only the drug or other nominal support. The investigator can request a waiver of the fee review and under appropriate circumstances, the fee is not required.

Description:

The fee for the initial review includes all subsequent modifications (amendments) up to the time of Renewal. The review fee is collected or waived by the Business Manager for Research Conduct and Compliance Office.
